Hi Heather,

I was so sorry to hear that Pat has clots and is receiving care in the hospital. Our thoughts are with you and family as you visit back and forth. We look forward to hearing she is getting much better and can go home soon.

Take care,

Love,

Sheila

Hi Sheila and Neill,

Mum is much better, she didn't need oxygen overnight so she is heading home today. It's still a mystery why she developed the blood clots. She's had testing for clotting disorders and to exclude cancer. The haematologist has prescribed lifelong blood thinners to prevent this from occurring again. So hopefully this will be the last we have to worry about.

Steve has been marvellous this week. We've all had a head cold but he's soldiered on and wrangled the boys up and out the door and into bed at night when i haven't been able to.

Joshua had an eventful week knocking out his front teeth. He's a bit miffed as a friend at school told him you get $50 for each front tooth, however Josh's tooth fairy only coughed up ~$10. Christian has received a secret love letter on purple paper so that's been a fun mystery for us too. He also had to give a speech on "My Ideal World" and he tells us he got an A++ so is very proud of himself .

Hope you are both keeping well

Love

Heather

Good to hear!

Hope she continues to recover nicely.

Joshua will now save on toothpaste while Christian becomes entangled by purple paper. Life marches on...
