Hi David,

Thank you for taking the time the other day to speak with me. Haven't been getting much sleep as you can probably imagine. I believe my wife stopped by Terry White this morning in an effort to collect Christians medication for the first time.

I've attached a commonwealth statutory declaration for completion.

Really appreciate taking the time to help me in this regard.

Thank you David.

Hi Stephen,

I think we leave the pharmacist out of this for now. We might get him to do an affidavit down the track but not yet. Unless Heather said something to him since taking the children?

Yours faithfully,

Hi Samantha

I believe she has talked to the pharmacy. As you know, she is making the claim she is the primary caregiver. She has never once collected any of the children's prescriptions, that has always been my role. Today she sent me an email stating she tried to collect Christian Ritlan medication today from Terry White but was unable to do so as I had already collected it a few days ago and there is a 30 day dispensing restriction in effect.

I was hoping to collect this declaration now because 12 months from now it may be a very different picture, Heather could potentially have had more time to demonstrate that she has been doing this role strengthening her case.

David, Terry White is the pharmacist whom I have been dealing with for years, he handles 90% of dispensing of medications to me for Christian ADHD, Asthma, and antibiotics for both boys over the years. From his perspective, at this time, he would 100% agree that I am the primary caregiver.

Please assist. I fear that I will need this later on.

Kind regards,

Stephen Cooke

Thanks Stephen,

I can talk to him about what evidence he might give. We don't need it to file the application. Please focus on your affidavit now and we can get it all filed and move onto this.

Yours faithfully,
